LET'S HEAR FROM...

Surges Storm

The wind echoed through the barren wasteland, intertwining with the witch fingered trees. Surge ailed into his uncanny valley, no animals in sight, just the dirty, dry rocks. Slowly, he raised his hand and bellowed "I am the best God, everyone and everything shall ~~break~~ bow down to me!" The slipstream of lava that replaced his blood, his army of swaying hair (he always spends ages on) trailed with ash.

25 years later

Humans perilously roamed the ~~desert~~ desolate land, with no lush forests, no plants, only rain grey. A path An old village next to the unforbidden volcano was always petrifed of Surge, but his dying heart was decaying with tears.

"Master, please come out!" A girl asked.

"You alarmed me, foolish mortal, what shall you need?" His corrupted face staggered slightly.

"I'm sorry to alarm you sir, can you grow more plants?" She requested. Surge chuckled to observing the land "You destroyed everything I created with I had to give my life too?!" His enraged rage sparked the nature covering the plant.

Ash filled her nostrils, her clothes getting stained with burnt remains of lava. She retreated, knowing he may start to erupt.

"The humans never understand, my power that ~~can~~ can engulf everything, and the power of earth ~~is~~ will be in the palm of my hands." Surge vanished into a pit of dusk.

Prologue

She ran. Ran, ran, ran. Faster than her beating heart, thudding painfully in her chest at every sound that trailed behind her, following her perilous route through the Forbidden forest, where no mortal should ever enter. She didn't care, though. The thing behind her meant good. She knew that much, but the 'good' she was going wasn't good enough... Closer and closer, nearer and nearer it ~~to~~ chased her in hot pursuit. She could now hear its ^{rustled} grounds, amplified in her ear. When he it was in arm's reach of her, it lunged forward, to Missed. It tried again. Missed once more. It tried one last time, and managed to pull her into the darkness, despite her cries of terror.

Tyoriaia woke from her dream, the screams of younger ^{best} still ringing in her ears. The nightmare of how she had first become the ~~per~~ goddess who she was now kept coming back to her. She wondered how she, ~~the~~ the Goddess of Air and Water, had ever been a plain, useless, horrible mortal centuries ago. But now, ~~here~~ here she was. Skin a grassy ~~emerald~~ emerald green, hair a strong ~~glow~~ fluorescent silvery blue, and eyes a whirlpool of glowing crystals. Floating. Drifting towards ~~the~~ her bedroom door. She entered the control room ^{} ready to tackle another day. But when she saw the destruction her eyes formed to a ruby-red storm.

She had had enough. Tyoriaia stormed out of the Control Centre and ~~quickly~~ furiously stomped out ~~or~~ into the Announcement room and braced herself before yelling: "What have you mortals done with my world!" "W-w-what do you mean 'What have we done?'" stammered a shocked woman who was frozen to the spot.
